

CITED BY THE CATHOLIC YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB

Three of the seven persons who were honored yesterday are shown with the Most Rev. John F. O'Hara, auxiliary bishop of the United States Army and Navy Vicariate. They are Rosemary Lamkey, 14-year-old author; Donn Fendler, Boy Scout who was lost in the Maine mountains for nine days, and Miss Lucy Brennan, selected as the "ideal teacher." The ceremony was held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

CATHOLIC WOMEN BEGIN HONOR ROLL

Inscribe Names of Seven, Some of Other Faiths, on It for Contributions to Life

'IDEAL TEACHER' HONORED

Miss Lucy Brennan Cited for Aiding 17 Boys to Receive Degrees From Fordham

The first seven names were inscribed on the new honor roll of the Catholic Young Women's Club at its annual communion breakfast held yesterday at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria. The citations, awarded to Catholics and non-Catholics, were for "contributions to Catholic life in America."

Miss Lucy Brennan, who for more than forty-three years was a teacher in the grade schools of this city, was cited for assisting seventeen boys to receive degrees from Fordham University. The citation said: "Miss Brennan is this club's ideal of a true teacher, outstanding in scholarship and character, and an exemplar of the great single women who do so much of God's work."

Donn Fendler, the 12-year-old Boy Scout who for nine days was lost in the mountains of Maine, was cited for "not only his rare courage and intelligence, but his intensity of faith."

Rosemary Lamkey, 14-year-old author of an original fairy tale, "The Lonely Dwarf," was cited for "giving beauty to the world and promise of beauty for the world of tomorrow."

Others cited were the Rev. Robert I. Gannon, president of Fordham University, for recognizing in Miss Brennan an example of the fulfillment of "all the laws and the prophets" and awarding her a Doctorate of Laws, Richard Reid, editor of The Catholic News, for an editorial giving his readers a formula for Catholic action; Mary Ellen Chase, Professor of English at Smith College, for her book "A Goodly Fellowship," which describes convent life, and Archbishop Francis J. Spellman.

The breakfast, which was attended by 1,200 members, was preceded by corporate communion at the 9 o'clock mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral. The mass was celebrated by Archbishop Spellman.

The Most Rev. John F. O'Hara, auxiliary bishop of the United States Army and Navy Vicariate and former president of the University of Notre Dame, was the guest of honor. He told the members that one of the noblest careers a woman could undertake was that of helping some man to save his soul.

The Rev. James M. Gillis, editor of The Catholic World, denounced the "modern" book and the "modern" play as well as those who review them and give them their approval.

Miss Constance Armstrong, president of the board of the Catholic Young Women's Club, was master of ceremonies.